

---

ME/CFS Marshall Protocol

Posted by slowmotion22 - 2008/03/07 21:23

---

Hi

I've had ME/CFS for over 17 years and my condition has deteriorated over the years.

I am housebound, have fatigue, joint pains, muscle pains, cardiac pain and rhythm disturbances, headaches/migraines, flu-like symptoms, hormone imbalances. My blood tests show that I have many viruses and bacteria including two from a tick source (erlichia and babesia). I have tried many 'treatments' which at best have been of a palliative nature, mainly have made no difference at all, but some have caused a more rapid decline in my health.

I have recently heard of The Marshall Protocol which is being used in America and other contries to treat many chronic inflammatory diseases, apparently very successfully. It is a very intense treatment plan and requires a lot of dedication from the patient. Scientifically it makes a lot of sense to me and I don't understand why the doctors in this country haven't heard of it.

I was wondering if anyone has had any first hand experience of this treatment or knows of anyone in this country that has used The Marshall Protocol?

Thank you for taking the time to read this.

Best Wishes :)

---

Re:ME/CFS Marshall Protocol

Posted by Mwhiteley - 2008/03/16 07:31

---

I have been reading about The Marshall Protocol - I don't know enough about it be sure - I would be fascinated to have more feedback from anyone who knows more about this, who knows someone who has had it or is a docotr who uses it.

Please post any info that is relevant.

Mark

---